She said that several families have been anxiously awaiting the passage of the amendments and she recapped the process that has taken place up to this point including definitions and descriptions of the Family Compound and Family Subdivision. She added the implementation of the project checks off three of the sixteen high priority projects in the Gullah Geechee Land and Cultural Preservation Task Force recommendation.

The Task Force made comments and inquiries regarding: the anticipation of moving forward with the amendments; clarification that the proposed Overlay District is at the Public Planning Committee level; clarification that any further request for reduction in buffers or setbacks would need to go to the Board of Zoning Appeals; clarification Boards or Committees of the Town have to follow the LMO; clarification that density is not increased just buildable area; clarification and availability of staff resources to assist families wanting to take advantage of the LMO amendments; the goal of preserving a culture as opposed to a specific group of people; and clarification that property can now be subdivided without the previously required infrastructure and infrastructure can be added as building takes place.

Words of gratitude were expressed by all members of the Task Force to members of the community, Town Council, Dr. DuBose and staff for their efforts in moving the amendments forward.

b. Addressing in Historic Neighborhoods

Fire Chief Brad Tadlock stated that addressing issues throughout Historic Neighborhoods have been discussed. He said Staff has recognized problems in the order of addressing in some areas. He noted there are standard addressing guidelines utilized by the Town. Chief Tadlock realized the need for improvement in addressing on certain roads in the area if there are future homes added to the road. He informed the Task Force that they then worked on correcting the numbers and standardizing them to allow for additional homes at a later date. He stated that better communication will take place in the future as they work to bring a better order to the addressing within the community. Chief Tadlock added that they will engage members of the community and properties when names are selected for roadways. He clarified addressing issues have come up throughout Hilton Head Island and not just in Historic Neighborhoods. Chairman Stevens stated the Task Force will assist in any way they can to help get through the process.
